A good overview but still have some knowledge gaps.
Helpful to be able to air individual concerns and ideas.
Sound was difficult with the shared headphones - 1 trainer was always quieter than the other.
I was hoping to get a better understanding how to handle different types of neurodiversity and more practical approaches. Mostly what was covered is what we are already doing. Many thanks.
Very engaging although, I personally don't like breakout rooms that then require a group decision to feedback to the whole course.

I lost a bit of steam towards the end of the 3 hours but it was a good session. Similar to some others I've been on so didn't necessarily learn new things but always useful to have things refreshed. I really appreciated the input on icebreakers as we do these a lot in our organisation and I personally find them very awkward!
I think Jill being a volunteer helped refer certain examples back to Girlguiding and situations which may be unique to us really helped, also the wider group also had some really good points that made me think differently.
I have been on previous neurodiversity training and this is the best I have done! Very informative.
Great training and super helpful! The scenarios were really good.
Very engaging and great to do real life examples of case studies and chat to colleagues about their experiences.
Training was very good but not quite what I was looking for. Will talk to my HR provider.
